He married Mary Benezet Bogert, daughter of Theodore Peacock Bogert and Frances Nelson Jones, on September 23, 1857 in New York, New York County, New York. He died on April 18, 1873 in Nassau, Bahamas, British West Indies, at age 56; after his death, a memorial was published by the New York Academy of Medicine. The following is part of the memorial:

Dr. Foster entered Harvard University at the early age of thirteen years, which is striking proof of his precocity in his studies, and of his intelligence. He graduated in 1833 and studied medicine in the office of Dr. Winslow Lewis, of Boston, and graduated at the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1836, when he was but twenty years old. He then went abroad to study in London and Paris. He began practice in New York in 1839, paying special attention to the diseases of women and children.

In July of 1872, after a long illness including pleurisy and tuberculosis, he visited some kind friends and patients on the north shore of Lake Superior, where he most decidedly improved. He returned home in September to prepare for the removal of his family to Nassau, New Providence. This seemed the last resort in search of health, and although the effort was very great, and the trial of leaving old and dearly loved friends and relatives was severe, still it seemed an imperative duty to make the sacrifice. There he attended to his professional duties, cheering the sick and relieving the sufferings of many who were, like himself, seeking health in a foreign land. He calmly watched the progress of his disease, recognized every symptom of his approaching end. Frequently he would exclaim, "it is hard to die away from home, but it is 'all right,' it is 'all well.'" He died most peacefully on the 18th of April 1873.

During the early part of his college life he translated and published a work from Spanish. In addition to thorough classical erudition, he was familiar with three modern languages besides his own. Among his writings on medical subjects may be mentioned his essay on Atelectasis of the Lungs in Young Infants, and his paper on Mammary Abscesses, full of practical good sense, which deserves to be placed in permanent form for general instruction. The wretched treatment of these cases, common hitherto, became inexcusable in the light of his this eminently sound and practical paper. Besides these is his paper On Phenomena Observed In A Case Of Epilepsy, and his most finished production, his Oration before the New York Academy of Medicine.

Mary Benezet Bogert was born on September 14, 1832 in New York, New York County, New York. She was baptized on September 22, 1833 in New York, New York County, New York. She died on February 4, 1880 in New York, New York County, New York, at age 47.

Upon his return he received from President Jackson an appointment to the U.S. Naval School, then at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in
